

LARGE CROWD HEARS TALK ON ESKIMO LIFE

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH PACK-ED FOR ADDRESS BY MRS.
BLACKMORE

DISCUSSES BAFFIN LAND

Speaker Born and Raised in Baffin
Land. Tells Many Interesting
Stories of Arctic

Dressed in native costume, Mrs. Elizabeth Blackmore, of Indianapolis, described further the habits and life of the Eskimos in Baffin Land in her return address Tuesday evening at the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Blackmore who spoke in this city in November was brought back to Greencastle due to numerous requests to the Delta Theta Tau sorority which sponsored her appearance.

At the beginning of her talk, Mrs. Blackmore stated she did not wish to repeat stories and incidents she told about in her first visit. However, she did say that she wanted it distinctly understood that the Eskimos in Baffin Land, where she was born and grew to womanhood, are not blubber eaters. They dislike fat as much as you do, she said. Of the Eskimos in Alaska and other places she could not say, but the natives of Baffin Land, Hudson Bay and northern Labrador do not eat fat.

Mrs. Blackmore went on to tell of seal hunting and how the Eskimos would spear the seals at air holes in the ice. She said the Baffin Land natives live on raw meat and fish. Since coming to America, she told of reading about the various diets of the Eskimos but never once had seen in print anything regarding the white whale, one of the principal food supplies. In mentioning black whales, Mrs. Blackmore said this species was very scarce, and that she only saw one during her life in the Arctic.

Eskimos in Baffin Land are most sensitive concerning their beliefs or faith. They believe that those who die will be born again, perhaps the second time as a girl instead of a man or as a man instead of a girl.

There are no elaborate wedding festivities in Baffin Land, she said. When a man sees a girl he wants, his parents barter with her parents for the young woman's hand. Sometimes only three dogs are asked or it may be that new seal skins are needed by the girl's parents to make a new tent. When the deal is completed the man goes after the girl, who probably had no inkling of the arrangements. Mrs. Blackmore said the girls would yell, kick and bite if they had a chance, this being the Eskimo sign of modesty.

Some Eskimos formerly had three wives, she asserted. No native could provide skins enough for more than that number and the girls have to be dressed as well by their husbands as they were before marriage or the parents could take their daughters back home. In a household where there was more than one wife, the man was spoken about as "our husband" not "my husband." The man is always the "boss" and although the women may quarrel among themselves, the husband's decision is law.

Mrs. Blackmore described an Arctic blizzard in which she and her mother and two Eskimo guides narrowly escaped with their lives. One Christmas when she was 14 years of age, this little group went by dog team to a mission house, a day's journey from their own home, at the urgent invitation of a German missionary's wife. They stayed until after New Year's and when they left, the German lady gave Mrs. Blackmore a little tin box containing three Christmas candles and some molasses cookies, both articles being a new experience to her. When they were about half way home the snow storm which had been threatening, enveloped them and they became hopelessly lost. For two days they fought against cold and starvation. Finally they found some ice and melted it in the tin box by the heat of the candles and obtained drinking water. Here Mrs. Blackmore stated that they do not eat snow in Baffin Land as it injures their throats. It was necessary to kill two of their dogs to feed the others to enable them to pull the sled and her mother who was wrapped in a bear skin and lashed to the framework. Finally, the third night, the dogs caught the scent of their home and they were soon safe but it was an ordeal that Mrs. Blackmore declared she would never forget.

In closing she told how she happened to come to America, as the question had been asked her many times by Greencastle friends. Mrs. Blackmore vividly described the death of her husband. With a friend the two were fishing in a canoe when suddenly capsized. Mr. Blackmore, a splendid swimmer, was aiding his friend toward the shore when they were suddenly attacked by sharks and lost within a stone's throw of where Mrs. Blackmore was standing. With the assistance of three Eskimos, Mrs. Blackmore went out in another boat and searched in vain for her husband. Three weeks later, the captain of a southbound boat persuaded her to take her three small daughters and go to civilization where the youngsters could be properly educated. After stays in St. Johns, Newfoundland, Montreal, Toronto and Detroit, Mrs. Blackmore and her family located in Indianapolis.

During her talk, Mrs. Blackmore exhibited various articles of Eskimo life such as a dogs team lash, a drum, an Eskimo yo-yo and different kinds of skins.

FARMER IS TORTURED AND ROBBED

LEWIS O'CONNER, 59, BADLY BEATEN IN HOME SOUTH OF CLOVERDALE

Lewis O'Conner, age 59 years, bachelor farmer living on Eel river between Cloverdale and Cataract, was tortured and robbed by a gang of four or five men, Monday night.

It was said O'Conner was called to the door of his home about 11 o'clock by several men who forced their way in when he opened the door. Once inside they seized the elderly man, tied him to the bed post with sheeting, and then beat and tortured him in an effort to force him to reveal money which they believed he had hidden about the premises.

It was said they applied burning paper to the soles of his feet and beat him about the face and head. They finally departed after ransacking the house and securing $15 which the elderly man had in his trousers. They also stole a gun.

O'Conner worked his way loose from his bonds about 2 o'clock in the morning and went to the home of a brother, Bass O'Conner, who lives nearby. He was taken to Cloverdale the following day for treatment.

O'Conner said that four men entered his home and that he believed one other stayed outside. Robbers a week ago held up and robbed a Cataract store keeper.

OLD ENGLISH OPERA PROVES MOST PLEASING

"BEGGAR'S OPERA" PRESENTED IN SPEECH HALL TUESDAY EVENING

ENACTED BY LONDON CAST

Special Orchestra Music Adds Much To Enjoyment Of Famous Production at University

That there is no depression in Greencastle when something good in the way of art visits the city was demonstrated Tuesday night in the Little Theater when a packed house was present to see the English company present "The Beggar's Opera." DePauw has few opportunities to bring to the campus outstanding organizations of this type. A few years ago the Ben Greet players came to the campus with Shakespeare's "Hamlet" and was also accorded a fine reception.

"The Beggar's Opera" left the audience divided. Some left the theater with a large question mark across their faces wondering what it was all about and why. Others were voluble with their praise. At least it was something unusual and different from the average things seen and heard here both on the stage and in the motion pictures.

Like all early English plays, it was presented without scenery, the stage being draped in a neutral curtain with simple doorways for entrances. A few stools, a table or two were the only properties required despite the fact that there were three acts and five different scenes to the last two acts.

While the voices were not the best that have been heard here, the characters could be complimented for the way in which they stayed in their various roles. It was difficult to follow unless one were familiar with the time in which the opera had been written and presented. The actions, words and songs were extreme but the play had been written as a satire. The satire itself was as modern today as in the eighteenth century when the opera made its record breaking appearance.

A special orchestra was in the pit to play the musical scores. The popularity of some of the "hits" was attested to by the fact that frequent encores were demanded throughout the production. These the actors obligingly did. The libretto was a bit difficult to follow although the anticipated English accent to words did not appear despite the fact that it was an English company direct from the Lyric theater in London.

The opera ends with the problem of having a happy solution to an otherwise tragic story despite the fact that the hero finds himself with two wives on his hands.

PROHIBITION QUESTION UP
WASHINGTON, Dec. 3, (UP)—A forthright effort by administration Republicans to settle the prohibition question during the coming session of congress was believed assured today.

The first ray of light on the attitude of Republican leaders was shed by Rep. Snell, Repn., N. Y. Snell, selected by the Republicans to stand for the speakership of the house, frankly declared he would seek to get the Republicans to tackle the prohibition issue and "try to get it over with."

"I believe something out to be done about prohibition," he said after a conference late yesterday with President Hoover. "I am convinced the prohibition question is going to have to be met squarely and without too much delay."

COLORADO MAN ARRAIGNED ON BOOZE CHARGE

OFFICERS FIND HALF FULL
FIVE GALLON JAR OF WINE
IN HOME SUNDAY

Mort Allison, age about 45 years, who is said to reside in south Greencastle, was arraigned this afternoon in the Putnam circuit court on a charge of possession of liquor. He was arrested Sunday afternoon by officers after they found a partially filled five-gallon glass bottle of wine in a house he owns in Keightley town.

Allison entered a plea of not guilty and Judge James P. Hughes fixed his bond in the sum of $300 and set his trial date for December 11.

Armed with a search warrant for Todd Wagner, also colored, who has evaded arrest on liquor charges for several weeks, a party of officers consisting of Sheriff Alva Bryan, deputy sheriff Edward Eiteljorge, and Marshal Otto Dobbs and policeman Roscoe Scott, went to the Allison house Sunday afternoon looking for Wagner.

Marshall Dobbs went to the front door of the house and knocked, the door swinging open to his knock. Sitting on a table in full view was the partially filled bottle of grape wine and another jar in which wine was brewing. The officers also found several bushel baskets of wild grapes and a number of empty bottles in the back room of the home.

Destroying the grapes and brewing wine, the officers seized the glass bottle of wine as evidence and started a search for Allison. They later found Allison at the Bert Woods restaurant and locked him in jail. Allison later was released on his own recognizance but was ordered to appear before Judge Hughes this afternoon after a chemical test of the wine disclosed that it contained 5.95 percent of alcohol.

COAST GUARD BULLETS SINK RUM RUNNER

CREW OF REVENUE CUTTER
RESCUE OCCUPANTS OF LIQUOR POWER BOAT

WOODS HOLE, Mass., Dec. 2 (UP)—Explosion and fire sank the $40,000 alleged rum boat, Star, off horse Neck Beach early today after coast guards pumped machine-gun bullets at her during a mile chase.

The seven members of the Star's crew, two of whom suffered burns, were rescued by the crew of the coast guard patrol boat S13 and taken captive to base 18 here.

As flames swept the Star, coast guards rescued and arrested all seven members of her crew, two of whom were painfully burned. Coast guard machine gun bullets, splattering into the rum boat's engine room, had caused the blast just as the 813 came along.

During the 813's pursuit of the Star, customs agents and police on shore were arresting five suspected rum-smugglers and confiscating an estimated 2,000 cases of contraband, worth perhaps $160,000, which allegedly had been landed by the rum boat.

Thursday, December 3, from 12:15 to 12:45 p. m. C. S. T., over the Columbia Broadcasting system will be broadcast the announcement of winners of the International Harvester scholarship contest. Names of the 10 winners will be given at that time.

YOUNG WOMAN SHOOTS SELF ACCIDENTALLY

MRS. EDITH LAWSON TAKEN TO COUNTY HOSPITAL WHERE BULLET IS REMOVED

IS EXPECTED TO RECOVER

Hammer Of Gun Catches As It Is Removed From Pocket. Bullet
Lodges in Back

Mrs. Edith Lawson, wife of Robert Lawson, who accidentally shot herself in the abdomen Tuesday afternoon about 2 o'clock at her mother's home on north Indiana street, while handling a revolver, was expected to recover Wednesday following removal of the bullet at the county hospital late Tuesday evening.

It was said the bullet entered her abdomen and lodged in her body. A physician was called and he rushed her to the county hospital in an ambulance where he later assisted an Indianapolis surgeon in an operation to remove the bullet.

Although it was feared at first that the wound would prove fatal, the attending physician reported Wednesday morning that unless unexpected complications developed, Mrs. Lawson would recover.

It was said that Mrs. Lawson, who had been living with her husband and one child at the William Anderson home on north Jackson street was removing her goods to the home of her mother on north Indiana street. It was said that she had the gun pushed down into the pocket of her coat and in removing it at her mother's home the hammer caught on the coat pocket, discharging the gun. The bullet penetrated her right side, passing through the abdomen and lodging in her back under the skin from where it was removed.

Educational Toy Exhibit

LOCAL MERCHANTS COOPERATE
WITH A. A. U. W. IN GIVING AN EXHIBIT

The city of Greencastle which is widely recognized as a center of modern education is soon to offer an unusual educational opportunity to its citizens. It is to be one of the first cities in Indiana to have an educational exhibit of toys and play equipment. A similar project was sponsored by the Indianapolis Branch of the American Association of University Women. Mrs. Frances Dean Streightoff, formerly of Greencastle, was the chairman and is recognized as a pioneer in the field.

The Indianapolis exhibit was highly successful and has been copied in several large cities. This winter twenty-one branches of A. A. U. W. in various parts of the United States, will have similar exhibits suited to the needs of their individual communities.

The Greencastle Toy Exhibit is sponsored by the local branch of the A. A. U. W., assisted by members of the Pre-School Study Group, the Adolescent Study Group, and the Mothers' Study Club, with the cooperation of local and Indianapolis merchants who handle children's equipment.

The following local merchants are cooperating: Cannon Clothing store, Cook Hardware Co., Browning-Hammond Hardware Co., Hamilton's Book Store, Hanna's Book Store, Murphy's Five and Ten Cent Store, Horace-Link Co., Tressler's Store, J. C. Penney and Co., Pitchford's, S. C. Prevost and Co., The University Shop, and the City Library. These merchants are generously lending such merchandise as toys, play materials, books, magazines, furniture and clothing. Many private families also are lending equipment.

The exhibition is scientifically planned and will be divided into nine sections under the headings, the Infant, the toddler, the runabout child, the kindergarten, elementary school child, evenings at home, group activities, homemade toys, books and magazines. Each section will be presided over by a committee of women who have made a special study of their subject and will answer questions and give general information to those attending. Posters for each exhibit are being designed by the local art classes under the supervision of Miss Edris King and will be on display the latter part of the week in windows of the stores cooperating.

The Toy Exhibit will be held in the community hall of the Methodist church on the corner of Locust and Simpson streets on Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 8 and 9. On Tuesday afternoon and evening it will be open to local and out-of-town people who will attend the Church school leaders' conference. On Wednesday the exhibit will be open to the general public. At 2:30 Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 9, Dr. Warren T. Middleton of the psychology department of DePauw University, will give a lecture on toys. Everyone is invited to attend this lecture.

A special display of state and federal literature on children's health and welfare will be an added feature of the exhibit.

In the past, most adults have bought toys promiscuously because they suited their fancy or their pocketbooks, without really considering the effect they would have on the recipient. They did not realize that the child's pleasure was slight if the toy was not suited to his age and his physical and mental needs. That the wrong type of toys, too many or too few toys, might have a destructive effect on the child's character and general development, never entered their minds.

The pampered child with nothing to do but wind the springs of expensive mechanical toys has had his imaginative and creative abilities warped. (Continued on Page Two)

WABASH R.R. IN HANDS OF RECEIVERS

ACTION RESULT OF PETITION
FILED BY MOSS TIE
COMPANY

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 2 (UP)—The Wabash Railway company with 2237 miles of track in six Mid-Western states, and headquarters here, was in the hands of receivers today.

Federal Judge Charles B. Davis appointed Frank C. Nicodemus Jr., N. Y., assistant general counsel, and Walter S. Franklin, President, as receivers late yesterday on a petition of the Moss Tie company and with the consent of the railroad.

The complaint of the Tie company, which claimed indebtedness of $49,651, alleged the Wabash earnings were insufficient during the year to meet interest charges of $6,806,389 on $105,947,800 bonded indebtedness.

Liabilities of the Wabash exceeded book values of its assets by $6,000,000 and gross earnings for the ten months ending October 31 were $11,200,000 under a similar period last year, the complaint said.

The complaint says $4,730,476 of the railroad's liabilities were for material and supplies.

One of the principal factors in the reduced earnings of the Wabash, it was said, was the affect which the business depression has had on the automobile industry.

The Wabash, running into Detroit, depended a great deal on auto shipments for revenue. Since the 1929 stock market crash reduced shipments of cars has cut Wabash revenue.

Truck competition and the policy of transporting cars to markets under their own power resulted in reduced income for the Wabash.

INDIANA MAN CROWNED U.S. CORN CHAMP

EDDIE LUX OF SHELBYVILLE WINS NATIONAL HONOR AT CHICAGO SHOW

HOOSIER BOY SELECTED

William Sanders, Johnson County, Judged America's Healthiest Boy At International Exhibit

INTERNATIONAL LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION, Chicago, Dec. 2 (UP)—Oakleigh Thorne, wealthy New York state stockman, invaded the midway to win the grand championship at the stock show on beef steers, but the corn crown remains in the corn belt.

Eddie Lux, grain farmer from Shelbyville, Ind., is the "Corn King" of North America. By winning, he keeps the title in the family for the fourth time in 12 years. His brother, Peter Lux, whose farm is near Eddie's, won the trophy in 1919, 1922 and 1926. The Sours sons of Eddie Lux, Victor, Frank, Maurice and Thomas, are Junior Kings.

While the judging of livestock went on in the arena and experts pored over the ears of corn at the hay and grain show, the healthiest boy and girl in the United States were being chosen late yesterday at the La Salle Hotel.

Gertrude Helkes, 16, Dakota county, Neb., a pink-cheeked Miss who wears "sensible shoes," eats three square meals a day, exercises a lot and does not drink coffee, le. alone anything stronger, was adjudged the healthiest girl. She scored 99.9 per cent, the highest mark ever made by any contestant in health contests sponsored by the Four-H Clubs. Her teeth prevented a perfect score, doctors said.

William Sanders, 18, Johnson County, Ind., scored 99.1 per cent and was adjudged the healthiest boy. His teeth were not perfect and he had a small blemish near his left ear. He, too, exercises a lot, eats all he wants, and does not use tobacco or other stimulants. "Yes, I like girls if they're nice," said William.

Gertrude blushed and declined to answer when asked if she had thought anything about a husband. Eddie Lux was slightly ill at a hotel and was not present when the "Corn King" was announced. His brother Peter acknowledged for him. Lux's exhibit was 10 ears of white corn.

Reserve championship in corn went to Churchill Barr, Tipton, Ind., on Yellow Corn. Both the champion and the reserve champion raised their corn in yellow clay loam. Lux ploughed his field four times and used a common fertilizer. His crop was estimated at 86 bushels to the acre.

Thorne, the Easterner who won that a retired Wall Street financier can raise a better steer than any other stockman in the country, lives at Thorndale, the country estate near Pine Plains, N. Y.

CAPT. FRANK HAWKS HAS NARROW ESCAPE

YREKA, Cal., Dec. 2, (UP)—Captain Frank Hawks, holder of many speed records, today told how he came close to disaster when he suddenly became blind while flying across the Sierrita mountains.

Hawks was attempting a record flight from Vancouver, B. C. to Agua Caliente, Mexico, yesterday when he became sick while his low winged monoplane was buffeted about by varying winds.

"I tried several times to bring the ship down, but I was afraid I couldn't make it," the famous flier said in his hospital room here. "Things would go black. I tried to find the Montague field, but I couldn't see. I was afraid of crashing."

Hawks collapsed immediately after he landed his plane in a field at Greencastle, a few miles south of here. He had to be lifted from the cockpit.

PROBE BANK FAILURES

Bain, who has been seriously ill during the study of the banking affairs, was not arrested. The other three were jailed pending posting of $10,000 bond.

Judge Michael Feinberg who has conducted a search for assets of the defunct chain ordered the four held to the grand jury on charges of embezzlement, obtaining money on false pretenses and operating a confidence game.

They of course visited a barber shop and while there got the low down on how to play the great national game. The barbers, baseball wise, were discussing certain teams among themselves. They proceeded to tell each other how this and that department should be played. They expressed their opinion of most players including Babe Ruth. In the end, it was learned that one of the men present was the manager of the New York Americans and the other was the head man of the Cincinnati National league club. And of course both went away with the idea that they had learned enough from "Slim" Larue and his aids to win next year's flags in both leagues.

The contempt of court proceedings of Gertrude H. Boyd of Stilesville, against her ex-husband, William T. Boyd, of Franklin township, Hendricks county, was heard in the Putnam circuit court this morning by Judge James P. Hughes and the case taken under advisement. The plaintiff charged her ex-husband was more than $174 in arrears in $6 a week payments for support of a daughter, custody of which was given the mother at the time of the divorce here in 1929. The former husband attempted to show that although he owned a half-interest in a 120-acre Hendricks county farm, he was insolvent, and unable to pay the weekly amounts. According to figures quoted by his attorney his total profits for the past year amounted only to $17.99. The mother alleged in her evidence she was unable to properly clothe and care for their 16-year old daughter and keep her in high school where she was an honor student, without the aid of the $6 a week payments.

Students To Present Work In Dramatics

Miss Lucile Calvert's class in dramatic presentation will stage a one-act play, "Selling Saunders' Salmon," at the Little theater in the near future. The exact date of the play will be announced later.

The play was written by Russell Alexander, director of publicity, when he was a student in Prof. R. W. Pence's class in dramatic writing. It has since been revised and has been turned over to the university for stage presentation.

The entire cast is composed of students in the class of dramatic presentation. Miss Edna Ferne Jones, also a member of the class, is directing the production.

The performance will be open to the university and is the beginning of several plays of this nature which will be given periodically throughout the year.

The cast includes Roy Williams as Roderick Alden; Charles Phillips, Addison; Mary Prickett, Margaret; Horace Burr, Simon Coggeshall; William Kontz, Upham Stoops.

WILL IS CONSTRUED

The wills of Sarah E. Bowers and her husband Milton T. Bowers, who died recently within a few days of each other at their home near Finca, were construed in the Putnam circuit court Wednesday upon petition of the heirs. Judge James P. Hughes ruled that by terms of the wife's will all her property both real and personal was left to her husband, who survived her. Under the husband's will he ruled that $1,000 should go to trustees of the Blakesburg cemetery; one-half of the remainder should go to Anna C. Brothers; and the remaining one-half should go to the following persons in the given proportions: Sophia Goslin and Vera Hopper, one-sixth of one-half of the half-interest; and Alva Thomas, Ott M. Thomas, Floyd Bales, Otha Bales, Willis Crodian, Claude Crodian, Nona Davis, and Zefa B. Burkett, one-half of one-sixth of the half-interest. The executors were instructed to divide the estate consisting of several thousand dollars on these proportions.

The Central Trust Company of Greencastle has been appointed administrator of the estate of William R. Todd, in the Putnam circuit court. The deceased left a personal estate valued at $1,500 and real estate valued at $5,000, to be shared by four children.

FAILURE OF SALE DRIVE WILL SET BACK HEALTH CAMPAIGN

A challenge to the American people is contained in the 1931 sale of tuberculosis seals and health bonds. Warning was sounded by Dr. Kendall Emerson of New York, managing director of the National Tuberculosis Association, that if the Christmas seal and health bond sale fails this year, years will be required to retrace the steps in progress toward better health that already have been taken. "Only by constant vigilance can we hold the ground gained and any remission of effort at this moment would be to take backward steps which will require years to restore," he said.

The effort to provide money for 1932 to carry on this community-wide preventive and curative educational work of the tuberculosis association, is part of the state and national program of tuberculosis control.

The appeal this year is more urgent than ever before, to buy more liberally. As we face this winter such times as we are going through, increase tuberculosis control problems.

Many cannot give this year who have in past years helped make this community protection safer. The tuberculosis association is our civic weapon built to fight this battle for humanity, and its community-wide prevention and cure efforts depend upon your Christmas seal dollars as never before.

Christmas soon will call us again to save precious lives with these gifts to the Christmas seal and health bonds—humanity's defense, through which it is insuring a declining death rate in this state and nation from tuberculosis. These seals which we buy this December, will meet the cost of protecting our children and ourselves and those that come after us in the long future. Since 1914 the death rate has been cut in half in Indiana, and the nation. Organized anti-tuberculosis work, slowly is controlling this disease, once mankind's worst enemy, and still the worst menace known to the lives of persons from 15 to 45 years of age, those in the productive years. From this class tuberculosis takes more toll each year than any other disease.

When your package of seals come from the tuberculosis association let your mind dwell on the life insurance they are buying for precious lives and then see if you can't send a larger check than ever before. It will help make protection sure in 1932. This local state and national Christmas seal sale is all that goes on protecting in future years. Let's make that protection sure with a larger gift this December.

Work of the tuberculosis association accomplished only with funds donated by citizens for the little holiday emblems of good health which are used on Christmas mail and packages in every part of the country now, gradually has woven a community picture of prevention and cure of the disease and they remind Greencastle and Putnam county men and women, that without the organized educational work of the seal since 1914, there could not have been the decline in the death rate that has been recorded.

People wishing to help this campaign may do so by buying the Christmas health seals at a penny each. Persons wishing to give more, purchasing $2 or $5 or $10 worth of seals are welcome.

Putnam county's selling program is sponsored by a public-spirited committee of which Russell Brown is chairman.

Two organizations in the city, the Business and Professional Women's Club, and the Tri Kappa's, are in charge of the sale of tuberculosis health bonds and Christmas health seals in the city, which began Friday, November 27, and continues until Christmas. Meet these girls with a smile and a generous heart.

MOVIES

AT THE GRANADA

With many of its scenes filmed against the rugged and awe-inspiring background of the frozen north, during the great annual Newfoundland seal hunt, "The Viking," which opens at the Granada theater on Thursday, portrays the virile, red-blooded romance of a fighting love, the love of two strong men for one woman. Advance reports state that the exciting and wholly unusual hunting and ship scenes are absolutely genuine, as this picture was actually filmed and recorded in sound in Newfoundland and on the Labrador ice-fields.

"The Viking" was produced by Varick Frissell, who with 25 others, lost his life when the Viking was actually destroyed through an explosion of the ship's powder magazine, a catastrophe which shocked the entire world.

and not afternoon." Wynter said, his voice sounded thin and tired but it held a gleam of humor. "Please come in."

The door opened wider and a sympathetic voice spoke.

"Did I hear you call? How do you feel now you are awake? We have been so anxious about you, Mr. Wynter."

If her voice was attractive, its owner, who at any rate knew his name, was not a little attractive too. His aching tired eyes took in an impression of a tall, graceful girl, with a mass of soft hair too pale for gold above an oval face at which most men would have stolen a second glance. More than pretty, Wynter thought, because there was character in the lines of the mouth and the tilt of the rather determined chin—a mouth touched by a little sympathetic smile as she crossed toward him in the subdued light of the room.

"Oh, I shall be all right soon. I expect, thanks very much. Just at the moment my head's singing like a prima donna, top notes and all, but that's hardly surprising, since my last recollection is of pitching down half a dozen stairs."

"Yes, I suppose it must be a little puzzling," she said sympathetically. "You are in my stepfather's house at Staines—Dr. Martell."

It was a name quite strange to Wynter.

"Staines! But I was in Richmond the last I remember. How on earth did I come here?"

Almost as the feverish question broke from him another figure appeared in the doorway behind her.

"Here is my stepfather," the girl said.

Dr. Martell was a middle-aged man with a short pointed beard, who looked more like a foreigner than an Englishman, and in some indefiable way the tinted glasses he wore, behind which one had the hint of a pair of keenly penetrating eyes, strengthened that impression. But as he bent to speak to the man in the bed his English was perfect.

"So you are awake at last, Mr. Wynter—and not feeling too grand, I expect. Vastly puzzled too, no doubt, to find yourself in strange surroundings?" said a pleasant, friendly voice, accompanied by a smile that seemed to radiate genial good humor. "Or perhaps my daughter Helen has explained? No! Well, you were brought here between the hours of 1 and 2 this morning. Why to me? Oh, because I happen to be a medical man, I suppose. I can think of no other reason. You had sustained an injury to your head—apparently only slight. I am glad to say—and on top of that you had been drugged—"

"Drugged!" echoed Wynter, in surprise. "Good Lord! I do seem to have made a night of it!"

"Oh, the symptoms were unmistakable," Dr. Martell said with a smiling shrug. "A pretty stiff dose, too, it must have been. You've slept more than twelve hours—well, that's all to the good. You've probably left off the worst effects."

"With this splitting head of mine knew that," roared Wynter with a smile. But the smile was a difficult achievement. Hammers pounding in his brain, more relentlessly than ever with the effort to exchange polite conversation with his host.

Dr. Martell nodded sympathetically.

"Oh, I think we might manage to do something for that. Don't talk or worry, but just lie quietly till I come back."

Jim Wynter was glad to let his throbbing head fall back on the pillows and close his eyes. Dr. Martell went from the room, to return in a few minutes with a glass full of something dark-colored and hardly inviting-looking.

Wynter raised himself in bed with a painful effort, helped by the girl's supporting arm, and drank the contents.

Something with more than a kick in it, whatever it was. It seemed as fiery as red pepper on his palate as he gulped it down, its potency making him gasp for breath.

"Now just lie quiet for a minute or two."
